

DESCRIPTION

The Master of Education in Education Leadership, Management and Change is designed to develop advanced professional and academic knowledge in the field of education leadership and management, with a strong emphasis on application in complex and evolving educational contexts. The qualification prepares graduates for leadership roles and further research-based postgraduate study, equipping them to contribute meaningfully to knowledge development and professional practice in education and training. It cultivates the capabilities required of academic leaders, decision-makers and change agents across public and private sectors, enabling them to engage systematically and innovatively with complex challenges, apply advanced problem-solving and data-informed decision-making, and demonstrate self-directed, ethical and original professional practice.

The programme promotes a critical understanding of education policy reform and curriculum transformation in South Africa and globally, integrating advanced pedagogical knowledge with leadership and management practices suited to dynamic contexts. The qualification develops students' ability to critically analyse and synthesise knowledge, engage with current debates, and contribute to innovation, social justice and continuous improvement in education systems. It combines coursework with a substantial research component to build advanced research capability and support the integration of theory and practice. Graduates are thus prepared to undertake rigorous independent inquiry, contribute to knowledge production, and advance into leadership roles or further doctoral study.
